We just want to make sure none of the information [REDACTED] discusses with regards to the investigation or the WMDD is of concern to be released publicly.

For example, if sensitive techniques are mentioned that would only be known to the WMDD, please advise of this. We just want to be sure you all are ok with the info being released. If you feel something should be removed, let us know.

Hope this helps.

We have a manuscript by [redacted] Vahid Majidi. It deals with the WMDD investigation in the Anthrax mailings. When we get cases of this nature we immediately try to reach out to the appropriate Section for them to do a review of the manuscript for any information they feel should not be released. My SC David Hardy has asked I reach out to you to determine who in WMDD would be the person or persons needed to review this manuscript. Your assistance is greatly appreciated.

Hi Vahid,

The book sounds very interesting. I would submit it to us prior to reaching out to a literary agent. A lot of times agents make strict deadlines and that can sometimes interfere with our review process, so it's better for all involved for us to see it first.

Generally how the process works is we have a 30 working day timeframe. However this can be extended due to lengthy or complex cases. We will take a look at the manuscript, and either mail you an approval or amendment letter if we feel things need to be changed.

Feel free to contact me if you have any further questions.

b6 -1

Dear PRO:

For the past six years I was employed at the FBI as [REDACTED] I just finished my first draft of a short book, that I have been working on since my departure from the BU, and it is based on my experiences around the Amerithrax case. The draft is a short 43000 word manuscript and I am just starting to look around for a literary agent to help find a publisher.

b6 -1

[REDACTED]

PREPUB-8817
9/28/2012 b7E -4

Ultimately, even if I don't find a publisher, I will go ahead with a digital self-publishing house such as Amazon or Borders. In any case, because some of the book centers on my work at DOJ and FBI, I am sure that it needs to go through prepublication clearance (although I am certain that it does not contain any sensitive or classified information in it).

My question is, should I submitted a copy for review to your office now before the book is in its final format or would you like to see it after I have the input from a literary agent?

Thank you,

Vahid Majidi

Hey Vahid, hope you're well. We don't do Pre Pub here in OPA, it's all done out of RMD in Winchester. I've pasted below what we have on the website that should be helpful to you. But let me know if I can do anything to help. [REDACTED]

Prepublication Review Office

Info

Prepublication Review Office

Prepublication Review Office

The Prepublication Review Office (PRO) is responsible for the FBI's prepublication review program based on the obligation of FBI personnel and persons with whom the FBI contracts to safeguard sensitive and classified information from unauthorized disclosures. This obligation is based on statutes, regulations, access and employment agreements, contractual clauses, and the fiduciary relationships into which employees or contractor personnel enter when they are entrusted with such information in the performance of their official duties.

The PRO coordinates the prepublication-review process—preparing the FBI response to each request for prepublication, reviewing the submitted work upon receipt, and screening it to determine if further review is required and by whom. If there is an objection to disclosure of any portion of a work, the PRO notifies the author that the FBI withholds permission to disclose or publish the portions and requests such modifications as may be necessary. If the author submits a corrected portion for further review, the PRO continues to work with the requester until final clearance is authorized.
